

Dear folks,

I hope this finds you safe and well. I'm good at breaking rules. Mostly my own. The latest is my decision to leave Facebook, and like a lover, flouncing off, screeching "I'll never come back", I've found myself, albeit after a couple of spacious weeks, creeping back to check once in a while and now have even put up posts on what's going on. It's hilarious how hard it is to leave. The frailty of the human feels real.

On a lighter note, I have a tour of Auld Lang Syne in January! Six gigs so far: Perth, Aberdeenshire, Borders, Dumfries and Galloway – so I'm really looking forward to that (ticket links to follow in the next monthly update). And we have four more Campbell's Ceilidhs to go this year – hope to see you at one of them.

Lismore's calling and I shall relocate to the 'Great Garden' for the next 6 months, making that my new lifestyle. 6 months here, 6 months there... aaaaannnnd breathe.

More below...

Take care,
Mairi x

Bandcamp

Dave Gray and I made a stonking album as the soundtrack to the STORM puppet who was also at COP 26 recently. I'm very excited by the music and hope you grab a hard copy direct from me. It was up for album of the year at the Scots music industry awards.

"The slow sessions are wonderfully inclusive".

"Every part adds another bit of magic to the thrill of learning tunes, many I feel I have known all my life but never thought I could play myself, let alone with others"

"It's BRILLIANT!"

We have 5 Slow Sessions from now till Xmas.

We play tunes at a pace we can all manage with a little help along the way. All tunes are easy to learn and available through my 'Tunes learning' webpage. All subscribers get free access. Get access with the password: Lismore21
