

Hello everyone,

Exciting news!

Tickets are now on sale for the new show Mairi Campbell: Auld Lang Syne at this year's Edinburgh Festival Fringe.

We'll be playing the show most days from 4 to 28 August (4.30pm) at Scottish Storytelling Centre, High Street, Edinburgh.

Free track

In celebration, I'm giving away a free MP3 of Scotland's most famous song, which Dave Francis and I recently got back in the studio to record. Dave's playing on it is totally gorgeous. We hope you like it.

Check out my website to read more about the new show, buy your tickets, and download your free track (only available for a wee while).

All the best for now,

Mairi x

Other Fringe events

I'm especially excited about a couple of other Fringe events and keen to highlight them again:

- Massachusettes theatre company Serious Play, who invited me over to play Pulse in December, are coming over to present The Red Guitar (solo show from John Sheldon)
- Just Do It - two music and poetry/word shows. Director Sheryl Stoodley has an international, creative, bridge building revolution going on. Go Sheryl!!
- There'll also be offerings and great shows from our Authentic Artist Collective. I'm (still) not sure who's doing what yet, but I'll be posting details between now and August of what's on from us lot.

Hands up for Trad Award

I'm really honoured to have just won Hands Up for Trad's Inspiration Award 2018.

Heartfelt thanks to Simon Thoumire who is long due a award himself for all the amazing support he offers trad musicians in Scotland.

Here's my interview about the show in The Herald. And a mention in the Scotsman.
Exciting stuff!

The show is co-directed by Kath Burlinson, founder of the Authentic Artist Collective, and supported by Made in Scotland, a curated showcase of Scotland based work.
