

Hi folks,

The Pendulum band gig is shaping up for the Queen's Hall in Edinburgh on Saturday 15 February. I love this music and after the great feedback on Storm's soundtrack, I'm really excited to be working some of those tracks live. It's going to be juicy, dancy and deep! Support is by the wonderful Marc Pilley of Hobotalk, a very special singer and songwriter. Tickets still available.

There's also InVisible Lines by Kath Burlinson, the upcoming Canada tour to Halifax, Mabou, Brockville and Toronto, and a reminder about the InterPlay Untensive in Edinburgh in October.

InVisible Lines by Kath Burlinson

InvisibleLines trailer

Kath Burlinson, my co-creator and director, is showing up too in her own beautiful way with her show InVisible Lines, a meditation on the body, ageing, our beauty and frailty. Kath supports so many other artists through her workshops. I've never met anyone so generous and skilled with others' artistry.

Read more about Kath and her fascinating life in theatre at www.sorcharablog.com.

Don't miss a chance to see Kath's thought-provoking show InVisible lines at the Scottish Storytelling Centre on 22 February and at the Assembly Roxy from 13-16 March.

Upcoming Canada tour

I'm off to see my cousins across the water in March and April and very happy to be bringing the show Pulse, plus some workshops and concerts, thanks to Dawne McFarlane, director of the Toronto Storytelling Festival.

I'll be in Halifax on 6 and 7 March, Strathspey place in Mabou on 13 March, Brockville on the 18 March and Toronto from 20-29 March.
